

Capricious #6- Just Can't Get Enough

2007

Matthew Porter

Lives in Brooklyn, where he just can't get enough.

About Capricious

Capricious was initially created when a group of emerging photographers recognized that there was a need for new interpretations on photographic publishing. Capricious' contributors are all individuals with work that is born out of unique life experiences and points of origin. They are from different parts of the world, functioning in specific and often highly specialized communities, as well as, smaller private groups. There is a need for a new outlet to show artistic photographic work. Existing photographic magazines are focused on either photography that relates to fashion or high art photography. Capricious is the first magazine that considers itself wide open for new, un-established photographers. Capricious seeks to create the missing link between fashion photography and high art photography by demanding that a space for up and coming emerging photographers with an emphasis on fine art photography be made within the photographic community.

Capricious hand picks new talent introducing them into an incredibly dense and vast market and in doing so begins the arduous process of exploring the trends of the current generation of photographers. Every issue is committed to connecting photography communities from all over the world creating a network to show how borders are slowly dissolving through the visual tool of photography.

CAPRICIOUS
by Matthew Postler

