Marty Walker Gallery Presents Pard Morrison

Marty Walker's first fall exhibit has been announced, and we're excited. Starting on September 11th with an opening reception, the show will be a solo exhibition of new works by Pard Morrison. Expect a whole new look from Morrison, with a selection of brightly colored aluminum box-like configurations functioning as both painting and sculptures. Using the process of 'patination,' in which each piece is baked repetitively with multiple colored layers resembling glazed ceramic, the artist has created three-dimensional mathematical game pieces like the one's you play with in Tetris or a Rubik's Cube. Picture an old school video game meets art – visually stimulating, and a lot of fun!
